

CDC Cleaning Guidelines for Your Business

It's all about safety for business owners who welcome staff, clients, and visitors to their workplaces and the best weapon to bring to the fight is a commercial cleaning company trained in the use of hospital-grade cleaning products and procedures.

"Cleaning of visibly dirty surfaces, followed by disinfection, is the best practice measure for prevention of COVID-19 and other viral respiratory illnesses in community settings," according to the CDC.

The steps to help maintain a healthy workplace aren't complicated but having a plan in place with the help of your cleaning company is key!

According to Center for Disease Control:

Cleaning and disinfecting public spaces including your workplace, school, home, and business will require you to:

Develop your plan

- Determine what needs to be cleaned
- Determine how areas will be disinfected
- Consider the resources and equipment needed

Implement your plan

- Clean visibly dirty surfaces with soap and water
- Use the appropriate cleaning or disinfectant product
- Always follow directions on the label

Maintain and revise your plan

- Continue routine cleaning and disinfecting
- Maintain safe practices
- Continue the practices that reduce the risk of exposure

CLEANING!

Surfaces need to be cleaned before disinfecting and of course, to keep up your business's professional image. And don't forget that the most touched surfaces will harbor the most dangerous germs, so be sure public areas like bathrooms, doorknobs, light switches, handles, and railings get frequent attention, as well as desks, keyboards, and phones.

DISINFECTING!

After everything is clean and looking its best, it's time for disinfecting the workplace, again paying the most attention to the touch points. The CDC recommends EPA-registered disinfecting products which meet the criteria for use against COVID-19 on hard surfaces, preferably used by trained cleaning professionals to ensure safe and effective application.
